Audience Behavioural Measurement

Use of Anonymised Data

We may purchase, or collect, anonymised, aggregated datasets relating to the performance of our Out of Home advertising (such as billboards, street, roads, highways, transit etc.), or anonymised and aggregated transaction and purchase history from data providers. We do this to better understand the types of people who will see the advertisements we promote, on behalf of our advertisers. We do not seek to analyse Personal Data on an individual level.

SDK and Mobile Data

From time to time we engage with data partners which use data obtained from SDKs in apps, GPS data or other data obtained from a mobile device's IP address (if the user has consented for this data to be shared). This data provided helps us provide insight into large scale audience behaviour.

Cellular signal and SDK data

Where users consent, mobile phone networks may supply insights based on anonymized, aggregated data from triangulated cellular signals from phones using their network. These insights give us insights into group level audience behaviours within the vicinity of our ad locations.

"SDK" stands for "software development kit". It is a piece of code that is built into an app, and that facilitates that app to collect geolocation and other statistical data. When a user installs those apps on their device, the user has the option of giving their consent to enable the collection of limited elements of their data including Personal Data to enhance their app usage and to share with the app provider's commercial partners. Users can revoke consent to share data at any time in the apps' settings.

Clear Channel receives anonymised, aggregated datasets from carefully chosen GDPR-compliant data partners that helps us, and our data partners best understand consumer demographics and engagement in the real world.

Geofencing (including mobile retargeting)

"Geofencing" is a location-based service in which an app or other software uses GPS, RFID, Wi-Fi or cellular data to trigger a pre-programmed action when a mobile device or RFID tag enters or exits a virtual boundary set up around a geographical location, known as a geofence.

Beacons are installed on Clear Channel panels in a number of our sites. These beacons passively transmit a location signal inside its "geofence" which can be detected by mobile devices. If you have given permission for your mobile device to connect to beacons, via an app or your device settings, then your mobile device may try to connect to the beacon installed in those billboards and share its geographical information with those beacons when you come within the beacon's geofence.

Clear Channel and our business partners may use that information to understand audience behaviour, and business partners may send targeted messages to consenting devices relating to the content of nearby advertisements when those devices are in the vicinity of our panels. Users can revoke consent to share geolocation data with beacons at any time in the settings on their phones. If you have not given consent for your mobile devices to share data, it will not be shared.

All data used by or shared with Clear Channel by its partners, are aggregated and anonymous and we do not retain information on individuals, nor do we identify, track, profile or target individual people.

Computer vision software on our panels

Computer vision software is in standard use across the Out of Home Advertising industry (such as billboards, street, roads, highways, transit etc.). When computer vision technology is used, including if it is used for a campaign by Clear Channel or its partners, a camera installed within the screen is enabled which can recognise the basic characteristics of people (for example it may detect motion in front of the screen, or height, gender or hair colour etc.) looking at the screen in order to personalise interactions with the advertisement they see. For example, an interactive advertisement might show a pair of sunglasses on a female or male character depending on the gender of person looking at the screen, or move around in accordance with the motion of the person in front of it. It may also capture apparent engagement with the advertisements we promote (such as the length of time someone looked at the advertisement, or expressions).

If Clear Channel or our partners use computer vision technology, any Personal Data captured by it is only captured and stored temporarily. Software used is subject to strict deidentification, information security and almost immediate memory wiping procedures. We engage software providers that have been subject to data privacy impact assessments and signed terms agreeing to abide by Applicable Data Protection Legislation. Clear Channel do not attempt to identify you from Computer Vision software. We are not interested in profiling individuals. We and our data partners instead anonymise and aggregate any information into large scale datasets for us to better understand demographic audience reactions to the advertisements we promote, on behalf of our advertisers.

Your Rights

Under the GDPR and other applicable legislation, you have rights over your Personal Data. Those rights include (subject to legal and regulatory requirements):

Right to Rectification of Personal Data

We will always tell you if we do any such activity using your Personal Data.

Right to Access Personal Data

Where permitted by law, you may have the right to contact us to request a copy of Personal Data that we hold about you. Before responding to your request, we may ask you to (i) verify your identity and (ii) provide further details so we can better respond to your request.

These rights may be limited, for example if fulfilling your request would reveal personal data about another person, where they would infringe the rights of a third party (including our rights) or if you ask us to delete information which we are required by law to keep or have compelling legitimate interests in keeping. Relevant exemptions are included in both the GDPR and in the Data Protection Act 2018. We will inform you of relevant exemptions we rely upon when responding to any request you make.

To exercise any of these rights, or to obtain other information, such as a copy of a legitimate interests balancing test, you can get in touch with us using the details set out below.

If you require further information on your rights or our use of your Personal Data, please contact us at mydata@clearchannelint.com.
